Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Sunday 13 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
South, east, warm, mainly dry, increasingly sunny. Rain in northwest.

Today:
Warm to hot in south, central and eastern areas, with sunny spells increasing. Highest temperatures in far east. Rather cloudy in the northwest with some patchy rain, mainly focused in far west, where some heavier outbreaks appear towards early evening.

Tonight:
Cloud and rain across northwest, extending to rest of country by midnight, before passing to the east towards dawn, as clear spells and isolated light showers follow from the northwest.

Monday:
A fresher day with temperatures well down from Sunday. Most parts in the east and south will stay dry, but some light showers will be brought on fresh westerly winds.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Tuesday mainly dry and bright. Rain spreading to northwest late in day which spreads to the rest of country overnight, before clearing eastwards Wednesday. Thereafter showers and brighter spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.